

MOK Heng Ngee

Instructor
School of Information Systems,
Singapore Management University

Biography

Mok has been teaching enterprise software application design and development courses at the School of Information Systems (SIS), Singapore Management University for the past 4 years. Besides his academic responsibilities at SIS, Mok coordinates the SIS Enrichment Course program which benefits students tremendously by making professional IT courses – including those run by Sun Microsystems, EMC Corp and Novell – accessible to SIS students.

Mok is experienced with both the Microsoft .NET platform and Java technologies and was the author of the fortnightly “JavaTalk” column sponsored by Sun Microsystems published in the Computer Times (now Digital Life) from 2000-2002. Together with 3 other Singaporeans, he was accorded Microsoft Most Valuable Professional (MVP) status for his involvement in the .NET community in 2003 in the first year the MVP program was extended to Asia.

Mok is a qualified lifeguard, holds a Taekwondo black belt, runs the occasional marathon and advocates voluntary blood donation. He is currently pursuing his Ed.D. dually awarded by the Institute of Education (London) and the National Institute of Education (Singapore).
